Thai Enquirer Summary

Economic News

- In one of the boldest moves, Supant Mongkolsuthree, chairman of the Federation of Thai Industries (FTI), has called for financial and non-financial institutions to extend their customers a debt moratorium for 2 years, instead of 6 months as he echoed a request by private sectors.
  - ❖ Supant has said that the severity of the economic downturn was unlikely to reverse anytime soon, and revival of the small & medium sized companies (SME) and even the big corporate are unlikely to happen in the 3-6 months that most people had anticipated. And that the recovery would take about 2-years.
    - He said that if the entrepreneurs are not back on their feet then the unemployment will rise further
    - The 400-billion baht funding could help but the global situation remains fragile and that would mean the global trade will take time to recover.
    - This could create more unemployment in the economy and things could bring back the 2nd lockdown which the private sector does not see.

- He said that the 1% of unemployment is what is the actual numbers and that the World Bank's prediction of 8.3 million people out of job is the worst case scenario and that the various phases of reopening of the economy was not taken into account.

- ❖ This comes as the Joint Standing Committee on Commerce, Industry and Banking (JSCCIB) revised down economic growth forecast for this year to a 5-8% contraction, from the original forecast of a 3-5% contraction. The committee also slashed its export growth forecast for this year to a 7-10% contraction, from the original forecast of a 5-10% contraction, Predee Daochai, chairman of the Thai Bankers' Association, disclosed after the committee's meeting yesterday (July 1).

- ❖ The joint committee echoed its grave concern about the rapid rise of the baht which was at the fastest pace in June compared to other regional currencies. The committee expects the baht rise to continue for quite some time with the US dollar remains under pressure amid the Fed's QE (quantitative easing) program.

- ❖ The committee called on the government to employ measures to curb the baht's appreciation, urging more fiscal and monetary policies to help soften the financial blow of the COVID-19 crisis.

- ❖ Kalin Sarasin, chairman of the Thai Chamber of Commerce (TCC), issued a plea to Prime Minister Gen Prayut Chan-o-cha to reconsider a cabinet reshuffle plan for the time being, fearing that the prospect of a new economic team will interrupt the government's efforts in solving economic problems and continuity of economic policies. He said the person who is fit to lead the new economic team must be able to drive forward the economy without disruptions.

- Today marks the 23rd anniversary of the start of the financial crisis in 1997, and the situation is nowhere near good.

- ❖ Brokers are starting to come out with their projections of the degree to which the Thai Economy is set to sink during the 2nd quarter.

Political News

- The House witnessed a heated debate on the budget bill for the fiscal year 2021 yesterday (July 1), the 1st day of the debate. Here are some highlights:
  - ❖ Overall, the opposition attacked the government's budget bill for not serving the country well in the aftermath of the coronavirus outbreak. Opposition MPs described the 3.3 trillion baht 2021 fiscal budget as disconnected from reality, with a likelihood that a large portion of the money will be wasted. They said the government formulated the budget as if the country's economy is under normal circumstances and without taking into account of the severity of the economic crisis.
  - ❖ Pheu Thai secretary-general Anudith Nakornthap claimed that Prime Minister Prayut Chan-o-cha creating more public debt for Thailand than any other prime ministers, with public sector borrowing ballooning to 6.98 trillion baht. He said this could take the country to on the verge of bankruptcy. Anudith assigned nicknames to the Prime Minister such as, "the Father of Inequality" and "the leader of debt making".
  - ❖ Kao Klai [Move Forward] party leader Pita Limcharoenrat took to the floor and accused the government of drafting the budget bill as if Thailand is not in any crisis.
    - He does not think that the government will meet the challenges with the usual budgetary strategy, focused on funding the bureaucracy and infrastructure projects, citing economic hardship facing the people including 15 million debtors who will be required to make repayments in September and 8 million people who will be unemployed, not including new graduates.

- ❖ Pheu Thai MP for Mahasarakham and chief opposition whip Sutin Klungsang said he was disappointed with the budget bill in which he said does not serve the need for the government to manage the country in a highly efficient way to overcome the massive economic impact of the Covid-19 pandemic on Thailand. A large portion of the budget is still being allocated to projects that do not fit the “new normal” especially the construction of road projects and the procurement of new aircraft by the Interior Ministry.
- ❖ In her Facebook page, Pheu Thai chief strategist Sudarat Keyuraphan claimed that Gen Prayut spent more taxpayer money than any of his predecessors. The total amount is 7.5 trillion baht, including 3.2 trillion baht for 2020 fiscal year, 3.3 trillion baht for the 2021 fiscal year, plus 1 trillion baht of additional borrowing.
- ❖ She pointed out that 80% of the 3.3 trillion baht budget is reserved for normal public sector funding, leaving only about 20%, or 600 billion baht, for investment in economic development, adding that most of the budget appears not to be intended to create jobs, but to build roads, to fund arms procurements and for training courses.
- After failing to show up at the Phalang Pracharat Party (PPRP)’s meeting on June 30, Deputy Prime Minister Gen Prawit Wongsuwan, as PPRP new party leader, is reported to call a meeting of party key members and executive committee members yesterday (July 1st) at the party headquarters in the Ratchada One Office Building.
- ❖ The meeting is said to focus on a planned meeting for MPs set to be held next week and a possible date for an extraordinary meeting to select the party’s selection committee to field a candidate to contest the by-election in Samut Prakan’s constituency 5 after PPRP MP Krungsrivilai Suthinphuak was issue a yellow card by the Supreme Court. The selection committee will comprise 11 members; 4 executive committee members and 7 party members.

- ❖ Initially, the party has set July 10th for the extraordinary meeting for this purpose. It will be the 1st time the new executive board carried out its duty.
- ❖ Gen Prawit told the party meeting to stay united to help maintain good image of the party and the government.
- The ongoing infighting in the Phalang Pracharat party (PPRP) seems to be never ending and one of the 13-key members of the PPRP that dethroned the 4 angles lead by Deputy Prime Minister Somkid Jatusripitak seems to be heating up.
  - ❖ This took another turn after Dr Somkid came out to say that Thailand may have to follow the Singapore model of dissolving the parliament to call for an earlier election in order to solve the economic problem.
  - ❖ This statement has resonated among PPRP members who say that the problem is not with the parliament but with the economic team managing the economy and therefore the economic team has to go not the dissolution of the parliament.
  - ❖ Another Deputy Prime Minister – Wissanu Krea-ngam, has come out to say that Dr Somkid's statement was not an indication of possible house dissolution in any which way.
- Pro-democracy activist Parit “Penguin” Chiwarak and Panatsaya Sitthijirawattanakul, core leaders of the Student Union of Thailand (SUT), reportedly travelled to the Pathumwan police station on June 30, but not to hand themselves to the police for alleged violation of the emergency decree in connection with a gathering on the skywalk over Pathumwan intersection on June 5 to commemorate the disappearance in Cambodia of pro-democracy activist Wanchalearm Satsaksit.

- ❖ Parit said he visited the Pathumwan police with no intention of handing himself in but to show his dissent toward the extension of the emergency decree for another months, as he read out his statement and torn up his arrest warrant before leaving the police station immediately.
- ❖ Tattap Ruangprapaikitseree, another facing an arrest warrant for holding the June 5th rally, did not show up at the police station.
- ❖ Pathumwan police chief Col Patikorn Sornchai said police will consider whether to issue the 2nd arrest warrant for their arrest after the protest activists showed no intention of handing themselves in.

- As stated in yesterday's News Summary - Bangkok MP Sira Jenjakha has been spared by the Constitutional Court after court judges ruled in favour of him, allowing Sira to keep his MP status for allegedly attempting to intimidate and reprimand a senior police officer in Phuket province for failing to provide him with a police escort.
- ❖ The court said Sira's action is a result of his normal duty as a state official. The court did not find him guilty of trying to use his MP power to interfere in police work.

- ❖ Sira came out to thank the court and pledged to improve himself. He also plans to file a countersuit against 50 opposition MPs who signed a petition calling for the court to rule on his action.
  - The National Anti-Corruption Commission (NACC) found former Prime Minister Yingluck Shinawatra guilty of abusing her power in violation of Section 157 of the Criminal Code for the unlawful transfer order of Thawil Pliensri from his post as secretary-general of the National Security Council (NSC) 9 years ago to pave the way for Pol Gen Prieuphan Damapong, her relative, to rise as the national police chief in the same year.
    - ❖ The NACC's investigative panel found that Thawil's abrupt transfer was carried out with undue haste, taking just 4 days for the entire process to be completed, NACC deputy secretary-general Niwatchai Kasemmongkol said.
    - ❖ The NACC found Yingluck had committed malfeasance in office and decided to send the case to the Office of the Attorney-General for litigation in the Supreme Court for the Criminal Division for Holders of Political Offices.
